Question 4 (27 Marks.)

Type correctly the following manuscript passage:—

Fish into Canary.

~~It is impossible for a man to do~~ ^{NO} ~~without water~~ ^{can do} all at once; but by reducing ² gradually the ^{quantity} ~~amount~~ consumed he may be eventually able to wash it out altogether, by which time he will have grown a large hump between his shoulder-blades similar to that of the camel.

N.P. To test the truth of his discovery Cy began to experiment on ^{not} a goldfish which lived in a glass bowl ~~in his house~~. The Each naturalist ~~one~~ ² day took a teaspoonful of water from their bowl, until in a month or so the fish was living on half the quantity that it had found necessary previously.

A few weeks later there was but an inch ^{of water} in the globe, and the fish was looking decidedly uncomfortable and dove in the mouth. Then, very slowly at first, Mr. Bliph began to ^{substitute} ~~put~~ bread ~~instead of~~ ^{for} the remaining water, and - yes, I thought perhaps you'd heard about it - he came down one morning, on April 1 to be precise, & instead of his whilom or ~~provident~~ fish, he found a slightly damp canary, sitting on the ^{edge} ~~rim~~ of the bowl; tinkling at the ~~low~~ ^{low} of its voice.

All that was left of the goldfish was the scales, and the bird was practicing these.

Question 5.—SPEED TEST.—Type as much as you can of the following passage in 10 minutes:—

[25 marks.]

PORTRAIT OF A GENTLEMAN.

Hence it is, that it is almost a definition of a gentleman, to say he is one who never inflicts pain. This description is both refined and, as far as it goes, accurate. He is mainly occupied in merely removing the obstacles which hinder the free and unembarrassed action of those about him; and he concurs with their movements rather than takes the initiative himself. His benefits may be considered as parallel to what are called comforts or conveniences in arrangements of a personal nature: like an easy chair or a good fire, which do their part in dispelling cold and fatigue, though nature provides both means of rest and animal heat without them. The true gentleman in like manner carefully avoids whatever may cause a jar or a jolt in the minds of those with whom he is cast;—all clashing of opinion, or collision of feeling, all restraint, or suspicion, or gloom, or resentment; his great concern being to make every one at their ease and at home. He has his eyes on all his company; he is tender towards the bashful, gentle towards the distant, and merciful towards the absurd; he can recollect to whom he is speaking; he guards against unseasonable allusions, or topics which may irritate; he is seldom prominent in conversation, and never wearisome. He makes light of favours while he does them, and seems to be receiving when he is conferring. He never speaks of himself except when compelled, never defends himself by a mere retort, he has no ears for slander or gossip, is scrupulous in imputing motives to those who interfere with him, and interprets everything for the best. He is never mean or little in his disputes, never takes unfair advantage, never mistakes personalities or sharp sayings for arguments, or insinuates evil which he dare not say out. From a long-sighted prudence, he observes the maxim of the ancient sage, that we should ever conduct ourselves towards our enemy as if he were one day to be our friend. He has too much good sense to be affronted at insults, he is too well employed to remember injuries, and too indolent to bear malice. He is patient, forbearing, and resigned, on philosophical principles; he submits to pain because it is irreparable, and to death because it is his destiny.
