2016-5

Time for a Fresh Look at Housing as EU Report Shames Ireland

Lorcan Sirr

Technological University Dublin, lorcan.sirr@dit.ie

Follow this and additional works at: https://arrow.dit.ie/beschrecmed

Part of the Urban, Community and Regional Planning Commons, and the Urban Studies and Planning Commons

Recommended Citation

Jane Powers: Gardens

Time for a fresh look at housing as EU report shames Ireland

It has been a busy year for all involved in the private partnership arrangement (PPA) sector. The report issued by the European Union (EU) has caused much debate and has raised concerns about the future of private sector involvement in housing projects.

Lorcan Sírr: The Home Front

Private sector involvement in housing projects has increased in recent years, but the report suggests that there are concerns about the lack of transparency and the failure to identify the cost of housing projects.

Stop-gap Treasures

The report also highlights the need for a more transparent approach to housing procurement, with a focus on ensuring that the public interest is protected and that the cost of housing projects is accurately reflected.

Gardens

The report suggests that more needs to be done to ensure that housing projects are completed on time and on budget, and that the public is given the opportunity to have a say in the decision-making process.

Home Front

The report calls for a more systematic approach to housing procurement, with a focus on ensuring that the public interest is protected and that the cost of housing projects is accurately reflected.

Stop-gap Treasures

The report also highlights the need for a more transparent approach to housing procurement, with a focus on ensuring that the public interest is protected and that the cost of housing projects is accurately reflected.