The ties that bind: Connecting family, community and place through the Gathering 2013

Literature

- Festivals are a medium for producing and remembering social meaning and realizing community through shared play and celebration (Levenda 1977)
- Festivals can also reconstruct identities of places and regional identity
- In terms of the diaspora people are often attracted to a particular place in order to maintain social contacts and because of 'emotional ties' (Hughes and Allen, 2010)

- Focus of this research is on the extended family and their motivations and experiences of attending a family gathering.

The Gathering

Research Questions

- 1. Did attending the Gathering Event play a role in connecting and reconnecting families and friends?
- 2. How did sharing memories and history impact on these individuals?
- 3. Did the experience of attending the event have a longer term impact on the visitor upon their return home?
- 4. Were identities affected by the Gathering?
- 5. Did place identity and perception change as a result of the Gathering?
