Focus, and not just Locus:
Investigating the island trope in faith-based tourism

Godfrey Baldacchino

This paper is grounded in the emerging discipline of island studies and looks at the manner in which the enduring fascination with Island Spaces - as places of defence, refuge, transformation, out of time/place and special in their own right - explains their early choice as candidates for faith based experiences and communities (think Lindisfarne, Maria-on-Lake Bled, Iona, Skellig Michael, Golden Temple at Amritsar) as well as contemporary tourism attractions.
