Canning, Rob. (b Dublin, 9 November 1974) Irish composer. He studied with Anthony Powers at the University of Wales where he graduated with a Bmus and in 1999 he obtained an M.Litt in Composition from UNIVERSITY COLLEGE DUBLIN where he studied with SEÓIRSE BODLEY. He has been the recipient of a number of awards including the composer’s class of the RTÉ Musician of the Future competition (1998), first prize in the international section of the New Music for Sligo Composition Competition (1999) and the Macaulay Fellowship (2001). He has lectured in the composition department of TRINITY COLLEGE DUBLIN and is currently pursuing doctoral studies at Goldsmiths College London.

Canning’s compositional technique mediates between a systems based approach, which uses various mathematical models and computer assisted strategies to generate and structure material, and an intuitive approach which allows for a greater range of improvisational freedom on the part of the performer. For example Melencholia (2007) for string quartet and live electronics uses a magic square of musical fragments to control the works temporal parameters but allows its performers the freedom to predetermine their own path through the grid. He has also completed a number of sound installations and multi-channel electronic works.
