“WOW!” (Some old bloke we found on the street)

“Some old bloke we found on the street” which is kind of like a dictionary.

“Innovative, aberrant, anomalous, unparalleled, momentous, independent” (the alcos in the airways with the help of a thesaurus).

“No. No. No. I did not order duck” (Theresa Lacox)

“Mary Whitehouse” (love it. It’s the idea we need to develop)

“ONETEN” (Poetry)

“I love you all” (Roseanne Bar)

“Cé hé Géins” (A Eminist)

“(Oasis)”

“Better than a sliced pan, well done to everyone involved in this masterful production.”

howdi folks!

hello and welcome to the first edition of Fresh the most exciting, controversial, slanderous, insulting, magazine to hit the printing press in this century. It was tried before but nothing ever actually happened (hope no graduates get a hold of this). Basically in this magazine we insult, degrade, and hurt your feelings as much as we possibly can. Hopefully we’ll also make you laugh.

The whole island knows about the mental parties, the ‘loving’ nature of the students the alcohol consumption, the ri-ri and ruaille-buaille and the general ambience of DIT Cathal Brugha Street, so our time is now to write it all down and ensure that all people are accounted for... For those of you not from the college reading this, welcome to Fresh & CBS. Students! We must come together as one and fight this damn system until we get what we deserve i.e. no education, more alcohol, 24 hour pubs & clubs, happy people everywhere, smiley faces, no fights, no exams, longer summer holidays and no rules or regulations. Eh, hello? WE GOT A BIT SIDE-TRACKED THERE.

As we used up all our braincells last night star-gazing (we mean in the compilation of the magazine), next time we want more scandal, gossip, unfounded rumours and slander...OK you get the drift. Boa constrictors are now on sale around the corner in the C.A.S.A. shop. The church in the middle of Cathal Brugha Street houses illegal plantations of lucozade bottles and counterfeit editions of Practical Cookery (original edition).

Here and now we would most sincerely like to pledge our undying love and gratitude to the pill-hill (Comad), the boggers in Bolton St., the bitches in Aungier St., the geeks in The Conservatory of Music and last and bottom of the list, those beautiful people in Kevin St. Long live the togetherness and team spirit of the DIT. Yeh right!

Hopefully, you’ll enjoy this mag...actually, we don’t give a poot. Next is the rag mag so please donate material of the kind found in these pages as soon as possible ie before Monday, 3rd of February 1997.

Student of the colleges, we love you all. Till the next edition. Z.

ENTS R' US

As triumphant winner of the fantastic election held in order to elect a prime candidate to sort out entertainment organisation in CBS, it is expected of me to say a few brief words: beer, cider, smokes, bums, puke. Now that my few words are said I think the best way to express my sanity would be in a little tale........

ESCAPE TO MIFUSTI

for Aideen

Joules decided not to partake in his usual routine of scratching in the dirt for tasty morsels today. The day was terrific. The sun shone on the yard, where two dogs basked in its rays. It was indeed a truly terrific day for scratching in the dirt. Joules however had a troubled mind. He had noticed that every day the farmer entered the yard and made his way towards the chicken pen. On reaching the pen the farmer would choose a plump chicken and separate it from the rest. The plump chicken would never be seen again. This troubled Joules. In fact, it troubled Joules a lot.

Joules was a scrawny Northumberland brown. Joules was however unlike the other Northumberland browns in the pen. The fact is that Joules was a super chicken. By a strange genetical freak, Joules could think for thirty seconds without a break while the other chickens scratched in the dirt and feasted on tiny grubs. Joules once thought about dirt for twenty seconds before going for a scratch.

Today, however, Joules' thoughts were quite sincere. Joules did not want to be the next chicken taken by the big farmer. Joules decided to discuss the matter with a rather serious looking rooster perched near by. Joules was just about to say 'excuse me!' to the large rooster, when he realised he couldn't. Of course, how foolish of him, even chickens know that chickens cannot talk. It is a well known fact that chickens can neither fly nor talk. Not since the 'big forget' of 1957, when an unusual orbit of the moon caused all chickens to forge how to talk and how to fly.

Joules' thoughts were interrupted by the abrupt slamming of the farmhouse door. The big farmer was crossing the yard. Something metallic hanging by the big farmers side dazzled Joules as it reflected in the sunlight. Joules was perspiring vigorously and pacing across the pen half terrified. What would he do? Where would he hide? The door of the chicken pen swung open. The big farmer tripped, stumbled into the pen and came crashing down like a felled tree into the midst of the petrified chickens.

When the dust settled. Joules was no longer focused on the now groaning mass of the big farmer. Instead Joules snapped back to reality. This was his chance.
Joules' drumsticks propelled him over the big farmer in an insane struggle for the pen door. The other chickens did likewise, as they were too foolish to devise their own plans. Joules skidded around the open pen door and sprinted straight for the yard gate. Behind Joules could hear shrieks of agony. Glancing over his shoulder Joules saw a frenzied carnage of blood and feathers as the dogs tore the less fortunate escapees limb and wing. Joules didn't look-back again.

Once through the gate, Joules felt amazingly free and high spirited. He felt like whistling a tune but decided not to, as he was a chicken and chickens cannot whistle (due to the KFC effect on the physical dynamics of the beak). Joules moseyed down a dirt track quite content in the pleasant company of his own thoughts.

Some distance down the track, Joules came across a large shiny object standing next to a tree. The big farmer owned one just the same. Joules climbed onto the motorcycle, took a pair of mirror sunglasses from his feathers, rested them on his beak and turned the key in the ignition. The bike roared into action and Joules accelerated down the tract. Joules was one bad chicken. He would have felt at this time like a tough guy in a movie, except Joules was a chicken and had never seen a movie before.

Early the following morning, Joules was woken suddenly by the barking of dogs and the mumbling of big farmers. They had come looking for the shiny motorcycle. Once more the bike's engine growled to life and Joules sped off across the fields. To Joules' amazement the fields, without warning, ended in thin air. The bikes skidded to a stop. Joules could hear the dogs and big farmers nearing. They would never take Joules, the bravest of the Northumberland brown, alive. Joules put the motorcycle into gear and sped towards the cliff edge. Two hundred feet below the bike crashed silently to its doom in the orient seas below.

Joules opened his eyes. He was not plummeting to an instantaneous death. Joules had remembered, he had remembered how to fly. Joules felt as free as a bird. This was not surprising considering Joules turned cartwheels and danced in the air. For days on end Joules flew until eventually losing consciousness with exhaustion.

Joules awoke on a sandy beach, sodden with salt water and barely alive. After some time Joules regained enough strength to plod to the top of a near sand dune to examine his new home. Joules gasped and his eyes opened wide as he stared across the land. Large packs of wild chicken were hunting Zebra on the planes. Joules had reached the Island of Mifusti, the legendary sanctuary of the wild chicken.
Joules the Northumberland brown chicken became a hero amongst domestic animals world-wide. Joules the chicken was never seen again. Farmyard rumour has it, Joules became chief of a large tribe of chicken and conquered many lands before eventually being slain in battle against a tribe of mountain duck in 1987. His bravery and memory lives on in the hearts of young eggs everywhere.

Yours in alcohol.

Exclusive H-Dip 4 gossip

A recent trip to Kerry resulted in a “rampant” weekend orgy. Obviously the H-Dip 4's are feeling the pressure of Mick Mulvey's Group projects. The results of this weekend would have made the Irish Clergy seem sedate. A certain "blonde" partial to the hockey stick was into partner swapping - to the disdain of many others!! A certain tall blonde allegedly met the man of her dreams, Who's dreams - who knows?

***************

Nollaig Fitzgerald EH4 has been banned from the Computer Room after being found on several occasion using tippex to correct her documents on the screen.

Simon Twomey has been summoned to court by the producers of My Left Foot. They claim that after watching him play soccer for Brugha he has infringed on copyright laws by using his two left feet!

Colin Joyce is planning to open a new leisure centre for CBS by tying a sheep to a lamppost!

Watch out H-Dip 1 Aidan Curtin is Back and he is bigger and better than ever before!
Shelly Carolan was seen peeling smarties to make a chocolate chip cookie last week! Long live the blondes!!

The scene begins

A distraught swan, drowning in St. Stephen’s Green one Summer’s Day. A potential hero pulls in a Ferrari and throws a rope to the swan and attempts to pull the swan out of the pond. Alas he fails.

Now enter the CBS hero Robbie Doyle: on seeing the situation Robbie without hesitation, hurls his humungus piece of manhood from his boxer shorts in the direction of the swan, and proceeds to pull the swan to safety using his lethal weapon. Hooray the swan is saved.

When questioned by the DIT Examiner regarding the incident Robbie coolly replied; When you have a langer the size of mine you don’t need a Ferrari to pull the birds!!!!

Mystic's Megas Predictions for 1997

* Simon Twomey cuts his hair and models for Calvin Klein
* Laughlin and Andy pay for a game of pool
* H-Dip 4 will be seen in Airways
* DIT CBS Rugby team win a match
* Larry is elected site president
* First Years manage to drink 2 pints without falling down
* Jack (H-Dip 3) enters the Guinness book of records for shifting the most girls in the one class.
* Bob (deputy President) gets married
* Deirdre Ni Riain sticks with one man for over a week
* H-Dip 5-ers will actually leave Airways and hand a project in - there are some astrological signs showing perhaps a thesis will emerge this year - it’s not clear if its one each or a collective effort.
* Karen Greany gets a direct line from the Students Union to Jurys
* Seamus Killeen is spotted by an anonymous passer-by without his hudson Blue jacket.

*Students from Environmental Health APPEAR!

You have just drunk 30 awful bottles of cheap, pissy & fizzy American Lager & you are going to be horrendously sick any minute. Can you negotiate the maze, avoiding that twat you met last Thursday and the pub bouncer and reach the toilet before you coat the carpet? To add realism to this game you may wish to drink 30 bottles of lager before beginning.

“This morning I awoke with my head in the fridge, the kettle had metled on the stove and I have vomit in the turn-ups of my trousers. What a smashing beer!”

S. Cummins, Booterstown

“I came around at about 8:30am in a police cell, I had dried blood on my shirt and my trousers were damp and cold with urine. I have been charged with drunk and disorderly. Cheers! I would recommend your fine beer to anyone!”

A.M.S., Terenure

“I have appalling diarrhoea and my bottom lip has turned green. I am in hospital being treated for serious head injuries. Is your magnificent ale available in cans?”

C.K., Templeogue

“...I had locked my three children in the coal house and later awoke in my neighbour’s dog’s kennel with a galvanised steel bucket on my head. I have no money left. My wife has left me. Your beer is a winner!”

C.B., Greystones

“I cannot remember my own name. Where am I? God help me i think I’m dying. What a beer! What a beer! Thanks!”

OIREACHTAS IN GAITH DOBHAR (A Dub's experience)

Most people don't know what the Oireachtas is about, let alone what the word means in English. I didn't have much of a clue about it until I went along to Gaith Dobhair at the start of November to sample some Irish culture for myself.

Gaith Dobhair itself was a bit of a culture shock for a city slicker like me. Barely a lamp post in sight, the place is virtually black when it gets dark. But there's no shortage of potholes or white-washed bungalows. A footpath lines one side of the 'main road' through Doire Beag, where we stayed for the weekend. All houses are scattered aimlessly through the countryside with only a few pubs here and there by the side of the road. There are a few signposts lying around which vaguely give you an idea of where you are but there are few if no roadmarkings. No doubt about it - the local town planner had a cupla uisce beatha on him when he set out to plan Gaith Dobhair.

One thing I'll say for the place is that it is remarkably clean - grass is rich green and houses are gleaming white. That's probably because it is raining if not drizzling most of the time. The world will most likely end the day Donegal experiences drought conditions. Ironically, there wasn't a drop of water from the taps in the hostel on Thursday night. I suppose we could have siphoned some water from the plant sitting in the reception area before some eejit threw it all over the floor in his drunken state. On Friday afternoon, I went down to the beach with some of my gaelgoir friends. It's really lonely down by the coast but we didn't see much through the mist and driving rain.

It took me two days to figure out what Gaith Dobhair was besides lamp posts and roadmarkings. On Saturday night, somebody pointed out to me that there were barely any trees in the area. This was very true - there are more trees in O'Connell Street than in Doire Beag. Why you may ask? Well, it would be impossible to plant a full-grown tree let alone a sapling in Gaith Dobhair without it being blown away. Nothing could survive those moisture laden gale force winds. My big, sturdy sports umbrella lasted barely three seconds before it was beaten to a pulp by the wind.

Although the temperatures in Gaith Dobhair are near-zero at times, you'll never get a warmer welcome than from the locals. They're very friendly and hospitable. Thankfully, they're bi-lingual - they'll speak to you in English or as Gaeilge, whichever you prefer. However, not having much of an ear for the local lingo, it was hard for me to differentiate between their spoken English and Irish let alone understand what they were saying at all.

At the Oireachtas, I was obviously going to experience difficulties. My knowledge of Irish is basic to say the least. 'Conas ata tu' is the one and only phrase I know so it wasn't going to get me far. Still, my gaelgoir friend Dee (C.B.S. Irish language officer), who dragged me up to Donegal for the cultural experience, convinced me I was going to have a great time. Which I did. C'mon, who could complain about bar extensions until 4 o'clock in the morning?!

Club na Feile was a great event at which I met loads of people from all over the country. There was ceili and sean nos (singing) until the early hours of the morning. The function room resembled a scene from a wedding reception, with everyone seeming to know each other and having a good chat about the year that had passed. The friendly and lively atmosphere at the Oireachtas would make anybody, even with little or no Irish, feel at ease. The two nights we went to Club na Feile were great, and everyone had craic agus ceol from start to end.

Gaith Dobhair was an ideal venue for the Oireachtas. The friendly locals and the cosy pubs made for a lovely and relaxing weekend. As for Gaith Dobhair, the bumpy roads and the numerous potholes give the place its character and it was a real eyeopener for a Dub like me. Gaith Dobhair has made a cultured woman of me and as for my Irish, it's improved in leaps and bounds. Learned a lot of new words, I did - dha no truir fhocal, b'theidir.

CLUBS AND SOCS

Clubs and Societies got off to a flying start in early October with many new societies being formed such as the Irish Culture Society, Manchester United Soccer Society etc. Then a fortnight later the annual Clubs and Societies Training weekend took place in the Club Atlantic Hostel. Over 80 officers from all the Dit Clubs and Societies were there in force. The buses left the college on Friday lunch time and the craic began with a ‘short’ stop in Ballaghadreen for food and drink in Durkin’s Pub (a choice influenced by that former Kingpin of DIT, Colman Byrne). The buses arrived down to Westport at around 7pm. Rooms were allocated and introductions were made by way of an Icebreaker session. Further introductions were made in the pubs and night-club that evening.

After breakfast on Saturday, it was down to the serious part of the weekend: the training modules. Areas such as filling out budget forms, public speaking, public relations and setting up a new society were covered. The final module of the day covered setting up a mock club or society. Suggestions were made for setting up new clubs such as tennis, snooker/pool and Olympic Handball. The mock societies brought up some interesting ideas, especially the Mother Theresa Natural Contraception Society. Suggestions were made by the group (consisting mainly of C.B.S. students) for equipment such as condoms, a 20 foot statue of Madonna and a Bob Coghlan ‘Emergency Contraception’ Kit! Ask George to explain that one!

That evening, dinner was enjoyed in the Hotel Westport. As usual the C.B.S. students sat together at the same table, and after dinner a Mexican Wave broke out at the table. After the meal, people dispersed to the various pubs around the town including J.J. O’Malley’s and P.J. Molloy’s, before congregating again in the night-club at the Castle Court Hotel. Various relationships were forged that night, including the perfect couple of the weekend, Kenny Vaughan and Conor Kavanagh, after a gratuitous display of ‘dirty dancing’ on the floor of the club!
Entertainment continued well into the night back in the hostel with singing, games of pool & table tennis and a certain amount of drink. A few people faded early in the night including Kenny, who was set upon by the 'Razor Squad'. How are the legs. Kenny?

By 7a.m., most people had enough and sought sanctuary in bed. Wakeup calls were made at 11.30a.m for breakfast at 9am? Finian O'Dowd kept up the good sporting image of the course by leaving at half seven in the morning to play a GAA match. After Sunday breakfast/lunch, Dermot Quain from USI chaired a debate on the future of Clubs & Socs in DIT. Most people managed to stay awake for the debate and a good discussion was had. One of the main issues that came up was the lack of sports facilities in DIT, an issue of great relevance to Leisure Management students.

After the debate the buses set off for home. The buses stopped off in Ballaghadreen for food and drink. Unfortunately, there was no food, but we had the pleasure of seeing David Ginola scoring a brilliant goal against the Satanic forces of Manchester United!

We stopped off again in Longford, first running into the pub to celebrate the closing moments of a 5-0 defeat for United, before having a quick meal in Luigi's. Shelley returned from Luigi's to find her better half, George, still sleeping like a baby. The stress of being a Clubs & Socs Officer!

Bob and the other A.B.U.'s took pleasure in reminding Kenny and the other forlorn United fans of the shame of losing 5-0 all the way from Longford to Dublin.

By this stage all Clubs and Societies are in full swing and involved in a wide range of activities. Maybe some more perverted than others. Ask Kenny and Conor about that one. As Brugha have the smallest contingent of Sports players in the Dit (except for the College) we still always seem to kick their ass in most Sports. On and off the field. All of those not involved, get involved. Anyone wishing to starch their collars, then join the RUGBY Club, just look around for Fiach O'Toole (3rd Year) and Conor Kavanagh. They're usually the 2 guys who never leave each other alone at any one time.

It's your choice, everyone else gets involved, so why don't you?????????
Because we students know best about our own education and our own lives and we are the first to suffer government cuts and what we try to achieve individually is totally ignored and our student democracy is under attack and if we complain about having to live in slums we are spoiled rich kids and if we have the odd pint or go to a disco we are squandering the tax-payers money and if we stand up for the rights of minority groups we are just trendy lefties talking through our arses and if we ask too many questions or speak out against injustice we are agitators or republican sympathisers and we shouldn’t get involved in politics and if we keep quiet we don’t give a damn about others and if we are heterosexual we are wanton and if we are gay men or lesbians we are queers and if we are women we should be at home having babies and if we are here from overseas we have no right to be here and as students we are a burden on that state and we should shut up and take what’s coming and for lots and lots of other reasons we are active members of

and i'll have a pint of black stuff please,

Abba and Andre on the juke box,

Oh those baggers in their black shoes and white sports socks,

Let's head to Centra - a pack of Marlboro lights, tens,

Too many in our loo - any excuse to use the mens !!!!!.

"So do you come here often ???"........

Chat - up lines were never needed by Austin !!!!.

Arses printed in the seats of AIRWAYS,

Not to mention those non - gays.........

(R) the mullingar dog - food producer,

(A) Peter MC Dermot's nephew bar-man, and (C) Meath's answer to the wolly child seducer .........

...... a jumper for services rendered springs to mind !!!!!.

Anyway, It's a place well recommended as quoted by a great person, who'll remain un-named,

"The AIRWAYS, it's that little pub you pass on the way to Denmark street, drop in sometime, you never know you might even like it !!!!!."
